Background of the Symposium

It is the global trend in hydraulic and ocean engineering to balance engineering measures with the environment and ecological systems. Complex and difficult issues appear worldwide; they are similar and borderless. This trilateral Chinese-German Joint Symposium on Hydraulic and Ocean Engineering offers a platform for scientists and engineers. The aim is to share ideas, experiences, and also to initiate and to consolidate international research cooperation.

The first trilateral German-Chinese Joint Symposium was organized jointly by the National Cheng Kung University, the Rostock University, and the Hohai University. It was held in September 2002 in Rostock. A memorandum was signed after the symposium promising the organization of a symposium on a regular basis. The second symposium was held in 2004 in Nanjing. The latest symposium was organized by the National Cheng Kung University in Tainan in November 2006. Cooperation has been achieved and/or enhanced thereafter, including the exchange of scientists and students, collaboration in joint research projects and consulting in related constructive engineering projects.

Organization

Prof. YIXIN YAN, Vice-President of Hohai University, Nanjing, PR China
Prof. CHIA CHUEN KAO, Director of Coastal Ocean Monitoring Center, Tainan, Taiwan
Prof. ULRICH ZANKE, Professor of University of Technology Darmstadt, Darmstadt, Germany
